Poetical.

God Knew the Best.

Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And suns and stars forever more have set,
The things which our weak judgments here have spurned,
The things over which we grieved with lashes wet,
Will flash before us, amid life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deeper tints of blue,
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And what seemed most reproof was love most true.

And we shall see how, while we frown and sigh,
God's plans go on as best for you and me;
How, when we called, He heeded not our cry,
Because His wisdom to the end could see.
And even as prudent parents disallow
Too much of sweet to craving babyhood,
So God, perhaps, is keeping from us now
Life's sweetest things because it seemeth good.

And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friends;
And that sometimes the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon his love can send;
If we could push ajar the gates of life
And stand within, and all God's working see,
We could interpret all this doubt and strife,
And for each mystery find there is a key.

But not to-day: Then be content, poor heart,
God's plans, like lilies, pure and white unfold:
We must not tear the close-shut leaves apart,
Time will reveal the calyxes of gold,
And if thro' patient toil, we reach the land
Where tired feet, with sandals loosed, may rest,
Where we shall clearly know and understand,
I think that we shall say, "God knew the best."

Twilight.

Now tender Twilight lays a cooling palm,
In greatest blessing, on Earth's fevered brow,
Soothing her into silence—save for low,
Sweet warblings, rippling o'er the utter calm,
Of birds, outpouring their soft evening psalm.
Still—as some wearied soul, half dimm'd in death.
Scarce seeming e'en to breathe, so faint each breath,

She lies, this Earth. The limpid dew, the balm,
Falls on her fondly with a mute caress,
While the low wind 'mid the laburnum strays,
And with its drooping locks enamor'd plays,
Parting with lingering touch each golden tress,
As loth to leave it in its loveliness—
And all things wait the night, which still delays.

THE LATE THOMAS A. SCOTT.

The following interesting facts in the life of the great railroad manager, are taken from an elaborate article printed in the Philadelphia Press, immediately after Col. Scott's death:

It was Philadelphia that claimed him as the great representative of metropolitan supremacy; Lancaster boasted of him as the greatest among her many sons that achieved renown in the enlargement of the railroad system of the state and the country; but it was in Franklin County that he first crowed and first witnessed the infantine efforts of a pioneer people to overcome the obstacles of distance. He was born in London, this county, on the 28th day of December, 1823.

Two years subsequent to his father's death, he had been living with his sister, whose husband kept a country store near Waynesboro', and also a short time with his brother, James D. Scott, who was in business in Bridgeport, Franklin county, and for a brief period he was under the care of Metcalfe & Ritche, merchants of Mercersburg.

In the spring of 1839, Governor Porter appointed Major James Patton, Collector of Tolls at Columbia. Major Patton had married a daughter of Mr. Scott of London, and when he came to Columbia he brought with him his bright young brother in-law, Thomas A. Scott—having taken him from Dillar & Baker's store—and made him a clerk in the Collectors office.

His duties were of an onerous character but they gave him a clear insight into the intricacies of the methods of long distance transportation. The pressure of clerkly routine, however, could not subdue the rampant spirits of the lad, and, with the cheek-rein well in hand, he let commensurate instincts lead him, providing his desk was always kept in view, and so it was not long before "Aleck" Scott—he was not known as Thomas A. then—was the most popular young fellow in Columbia. His physical vitality and his mental alertness were matters of great comment. He was a picture of manly beauty. Not a handsomer young fellow could be found in the country round. His blonde hair ignorant of barber's touch, hung over his shoulders, his head being surmounted by a hat of great breadth of brim, of the sort now affected by Buffalo Bill. He was careless in dress, and this trait distinguished him through his after life. His face was round and rosy, and altogether he presented such a strikingly handsome appearance that Columbia's pretty girls never thought of the pants tucked untidily in his boots. A daring dashing young fellow, he enjoyed existence to the utmost, but nothing can be recalled concerning him that does not warrant praise.

In the office he was spoken of as a phenomenon. His brother clerks looked on in amazement while he hastily glanced over several columns of figures that required addition, and almost instantly placed the total at the bottom. So rushing were his ways that he invariably added up three columns of figures at one time.

After the retirement of Governor Porter from the office in 1841, Major Patton, who had in the meantime purchased the Columbia Spy, left the Collector's office and was succeeded by Dr. Given. Young Scott, however, did not go out of office with his brother-in-law; on the contrary, the new Collector recognized his phenomenal abilities, elevated him to the chief clerkship, paying him the munificent salary of $45 a month. He remained in this position for two years, when he embarked in the lumber business, in which pursuit, however, he failed. About this time, and in the 23d year of his age, he was married to Miss Margaret Mullison, daughter of Reuben Mullison, Esq., of Wilkesbarre. At the time of his marriage, his ceaseless activity and constant work had failed so completely to make an impression on his smooth face, that in the Mullison family the bridegroom was generally known as "the boy." Shortly after becoming a Benedict, he made a second business venture. He composed one of a firm in the wholesale ice business, and although he scored his second failure, the enterprise afterward proved the beginning of the Knickerbocker Ice Company. Young Scott now felt a renewal of his love for a connection with the business of transportation, and he managed to secure a clerkship in the office of A. Boyd Cummings, Collector of Tolls in Philadelphia. In a very short time he was made chief clerk, his great powers as an accountant again having demonstrated his usefulness.

After remaining in the Philadelphia Collector's office for two years young Scott again made his home in Columbia, obtaining a situation in D. Leach & Co's. transportation house as westward shipper. His experience in this position added materially to his knowledge of transporting methods, and here as elsewhere he became famous for his push and rush. Sleep he thought but little of, but his wife discovered that he did give that great brain of his some little rest at times, for when he came home he shut out all business cares as he slammed the front door.

On September 15, 1850, the Pennsylvania railroad was opened to the Mountain House 1 mile east of Hollidaysburg, where connection was made with the Portage road over the Allegheny mountains. J. Edgar Thompson was at that time the Company's chief engineer. Talking one day with Dr. Given, former Collector of Tolls at Columbia, and then holding a contract with the Pennsylvania railroad, he asked if the latter could recommend to him a man to act as station agent at Duncansville, on the Allegheny Mountains, then the western terminus of the road.

"There was a young man used to clerk for me at Columbia that would suit you first-rate," replied Dr Given.

"What's his name?" asked Engineer Thomson.

"Thomas A. Scott."

"I will send word to him."

And he did, and by telegraph, too. Mr. Thompson was sitting next day in his office in Harrisburg when in walked a visitor, who was a picture of manly beauty and who bore about him such a breezy air of independence as plainly indicated that corporation chieftains had no terrors for him. His yellow hair straggled over his shoulders, a wide-brimmed sloach hat was perched on the back of his head, his pants were tucked in his boots and his hands were exploring the very depths of his pockets.

"Young man what do you want?" inquired Engineer Thomson, looking around and gazing on this picture.

"I believe you telegraphed for me," was the response, in a very clear but respectful tone, but with no appearance of embarrassment.

"What is your name?"

"Thomas A. Scott."

"Are you the young man Dr. Given recommended?"

"Yes, sir."

The chief engineer after a long and earnest scrutiny of the long hair, the big hat, the boot encased pants and pocket-hidden hands, said suddenly and brusquely "I don't think you will suit me."

"That doesn't make a darned bit of difference," replied the fair young man with the golden locks, not one whit abashed, "I made up my mind to come down here anyway and try you for a month and if I liked you to stay and if I didn't I would mighty soon tell you so. Good-day, sir."

"Hold on there," called out Chief Thompson as the young man was walking from the door, probably demonstrating more quickness of determination than he ever afterward displayed. "Come back here. I guess I will try you for a month," and he tried him for many years afterward.

When the road was completed to Pittsburg he was raised to the responsible position of Superintendent of the Western Division with his office in Pittsburg. Prior to this time, on April 6, 1825, he suffered the loss of his wife, whose remains now lie interred in the Columbia Cemetery. He continued as Western Superintendent until the ill health of General Lambaert, General Superintendent of the Pennsylvania railroad, induced the latter to resign in 1857, when John Edgar Thomson, then President of the Company, promptly appointed Mr. Scott to fill the vacancy, his office being in Altoona.

A through route from Philadelphia to Pittsburg had now been secured in the purchase of the Columbia road. Scott was found equal to the increased responsibilities. Such was his firm grasp of all matters appertaining to a rapidly expanding railroad system and his quickness in arriving at a solution of intricate problems of railroad policy, that President Thomson's keen though somewhat sluggish perceptions told him that he needed the bright-minded Superintendent by his to burnish his great but ponderous intellect. Accordingly, with his accustomed foresight, he made the preparations that would enable him to carry his idea into execution when an opportunity presented itself, which it did in 1860, when Vice-President William B. Foster died. Almost immediately after this event Superintendent Scott was informed that the President desired to see him in Philadelphia. On confronting Mr. Thomson he was suprised to learn that it was intended to make him First Vice President of the Company.

"I am deeply gratified for this mark of your esteem," replied the Superintendent, "but I am not eligible to the office. It is necessary that the one who is to be made Vice-President should have held $10,000 worth of stock six months prior to his selection. I do not own a share of stock."

"You must be mistaken, Mr. Scott," replied Mr. Thompson, quietly. "The books show that two hundred shares of stock have been registered to your name for a longer period than six months." The twinkle in Mr. Thomson's eyes was not necessary to inform Superintendent Scott who had been his thoughtful benefactor. The two men shook hands, and Thomas A. Scott was made Vice President, and the two greatest railroad minds of the country became centred on the attainment of one end that was reached when the Pennsylvania railroad system became the greatest in the country.

After he had reached the Vice Presidency of the Company Mr. Scott met his second wife while on a railroad trip, in the person of Miss Riddle from Pittsburg, daughter of the then editor of the Commercial Gazette. She was a highly accomplished lady, and by her sterling mental qualities eminently fitted to become the wife of a man of Thomas A. Scott's capabilities.

The new Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company was not long in demonstrating the fact that no misguided judgment had directed his appointment. The readiness with which he made himself familiar with the new phases of railroad management that confronted him in his new position was truly wonderful. He came to be known as one who could prepare more perfect articles of agreement or railroad contracts than any man in America, not even excluding lawyers who had made a special study of such matters.

President Thomson consulted his new Vice President in everything. The two men were eminently fitted to labor together. Thomson was slow and sluggish, but possessed of a marvelously acute intellect. He wasted but little time in talking. He would listen patiently to what people had to say to him, rarely making an interruption. Scott, on the other hand, was quick and impulsive and inclined to brilliant moves. Here was a dual mental equipoise that was productive of great results. Thomson's great brain planned and Scott's quick intellect executed. The latter had scarcely got comfortably seated in the Vice-Presidential chair when he began carrying out Mr. Thomson's idea of the extension of the Pennsylvania Railroad. To day its lines traverse seven states, reaching all their principal cities, and it controls almost absolutely the railroad systems of three states.

His matchless success as a railroad manager was demonstrated in the late war in the movement of troops, to which position he was called by the Secretary of War—Simon Cameron—and to Col. Scott, in addition was entrusted the duty of keeping open and working the N. C. railroad from Harrisburg to Baltimore, for the purpose of bringing men and ammunition to that point, as well as for the transportation of troops via Annapolis to Washington. Gen. Cameron's order (which followed) placing Mr. Scott in charge of all railroad lines and the movement of troops, was very broad and arbitary. It was that "information and instructions in relation to extending roads or telegraph lines, or operating them on government account, must emanate from Col. Scott's department." He fulfilled his trust with great ability, and afterwards became Assistant Secretary of War. Here he also distinguished himself. With the Cabinet he was a great favorite, Gen. Cameron, then the Secretary of War, and who is still living, says: "I remember going into Mr. Lincoln's apartments about a month after Col. Scott had been appointed Assistant Secretary and finding him, with his coat off and sleeves rolled up, pointing out to Lincoln his lines of communication with the army, his general plans of management, and then writing, at Mr. Lincoln's dictation, the President's approval of them." He was retained when Mr. Stanton succeeded Gen. Cameron, but resigned his position as Assistant Secretary of War in June 1862. Secretary Stanton wrote him a very complimentary letter in acknowledgement of his public service.

Colonel Scott on retirement from public office resumed his duties as Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Still, he was within call when needed by the country to forward ammunition to the troops at Antietam. He took charge of and himself accompanied a train loaded with powder. While telegrams from the front were depicting in vivid language the necessity of despatch and the train was being urged forward as rapidly as possible, hot boxes were noticed on some of the cars, but as the destination was nearly reached, a halt which might have proved fatal to important army operations, was forbidden despite the formidable danger to the train which had been veloped, and the powder cars arrived at the point where they were needed, amid the commingled amazement, consternation and gratification of the spectators, with blazing wheels!

Again, when it was necessary, after the battle of Gettysburg, to transport two entire army corps from the seaboard to Tennessee, President Lincoln placed him in charge of the task. In less than ten days twenty thousand men, with baggage supplies and material, were transported one thousand miles and reinforced the Army of the Cumberland. This is regarded as one of the most remarkable feats of any war. With this brilliant achievement his connection with public administration ceased.

In 1873 the Texas and Pacific railroad, in which he had abiding faith, made him bankrupt; in 1881 it enabled him to foot up his assets with the neat little sum of $17,000,000. The failure of Jay Cooke & Co., which created the panic of '73, came upon the country just at the time Col. Scott was concluding arrangements with the English capitalists. The monied men of England naturally refused to carry out their almost completed bargain, and he hastened back to Philadelphia to endeavor to rescue the new corporation from irretrievable disaster. Through the assistance of several friends, (the government refusing to come to the rescue) and his individual pledges to the amount of $7,000,000, he was enabled to do so. President Thomson was on one note for $1,500,000. It was this latter that caused the first and only estrangement between these men. Col. Scott wanted to resign all his positions but the offer was not given a moments thought, Thomson, although aggrieved, still believing in this eventual success.

On May 27, 1874, John Edgar Thomson died, and as we meet, Thomas A. Scott was chosen as his successor. How well he performed the trust is best told by the condition of the road to-day. Its mileage is almost one-tenth of the entire railroad mileage of the United States. The aggregate length of these lines is nearly eight thousand miles; the earnings are almost $200,000 for every day in the year, and the net profit is almost $109,000 for every secular day in the year. The capital invested is more than $350 000,000, and the united pay-rolls carry on them the names of an army of 100,000 men. Such is the system which Col. Scott perfected and harmonized. It is now beyond the fear of rivalry. New enterprises in the west only add its terrific, competition in the east can only result in loss to those who attempt it.

A WORLD OF GOOD.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other bitters as it is not a whisky drink. It is more like the old fashioned bone set tea that has done a world of good. If you don't feel just right try Hop Bitters.—Nunda News.

A watchmaker in Newcastle, Pa., says a Pittsburg paper, has completed a set of three gold shirt studs, in one of which is a watch that keeps excellent time, the dial being about three eighths of an inch in diameter. The three studs are connected by a strip of silver inside the shirt bosom, and the watch contained in the middle one is wound up by turning the stud above, and the hands are set by turning the one below. But perhaps the most remarkable thing about the liliputian machine is that it works with a pendulum, like a clock, and the pendulum will act with ease and accuracy in whatever position the timepiece is placed, even if it be turned upside down.

IMPROVEMENT FOR MIND AND BODY.

For genuine merit there is no tonic sold that begins to compare with Parker's Ginger Tonic. One 50 cent bottle contains more life and strength restoring power than a bushel of malt or a gallon of pure milk. As an appetizer, blood purifier and kidney corrector, it meets with astonishing success, and invalids find its use promptly followed by renewed energy and vivacity, mental and physical improvement, and gradual restoration to perfect health. Anatomy of an Oyster.

Every oyster has a mouth, a heart a liver, a stomach, cunningly devised intestines and other necessary organs, just as all living, moving and intelligent creatures have. And all these things are covered from man's rudely inquisitive gaze by a mantle of pearly ganze, whose woof and warp put to shame the frost lace on your windows in winter. The mouth is at the smaller end of the oyster, adjoining the hinge. It is of oval shape, and though not readily seen by an unpracticed eye, its location and size can be easily discovered by gently pushing a blunt bodkin or similar instrument along the surface of the locality mentioned. When the spot is found your bodkin can be thrust between the delicate lips and a considerable distance down towards the stomach without causing the oyster to yell with pain. From this mouth is, of course, a sort of canal to convey food to the stomach, whence it passes into the intestines. With an exceedingly delicate and sharp knife you can take off the "mantle" of the oyster, where there will be disclosed to you a half moon shaped space just above the muscle or so-called "heart." This space is the oyster's pericardium, and within it is the real heart. This heart is made up of two parts, just as the human heart is, one of which receives the blood from the gills through a net work of blood vessels and the other drives the blood out through arteries. In this important matter the oyster differs in no respect from the other warm or cold blooded animals. And no one need laugh incredulously at the assertion that oysters have blood. It is not ruddy, according to the accepted notion about blood, but it is nevertheless blood to all oyster intents and purposes. In the same vicinity, and in marvelously proper positions, will be found all the other organs named. But it is very proper to be incredulous about that mouth and organs. At first glance it would seem that they are utterly useless, for the mouth cannot snap around for food, and the oyster has no arms wherewith to grab its dinner or lunch. True, apparently, for each oyster has 1,000 arms, tiny, delicate, almost invisible. And each one of them is incessantly at work gathering up food and gently pushing it into the lazy mouth of the indolently comfortable creature. The gills are the thin flaps so noticeably perceptible a ound the front face part of the undressed oyster, below the muscle. Each of these gills is covered with minute, hair-like arms, very close together, and perpetually in motion to and fro in the same unwearied direction. They catch food from the water, strain it carefully of improper substances, and waft it upward over the mantle's smooth surface to the gaping mouth, which placidly gathers it up until hunger is appeased and then the body goes to sleep without turning over. Any one can observe this singular process of feeding by placing a minute quantity of some harmless coloring matter on the gills. If it will not offend the oyster's delicate palate the coloring will be seen at once propelled by invisible hands towards the mouth, and thence slowly down into the stomach. And that is all I know about oyster anatomy, except that the liver almost entirely surrounds the stomach and is of a dark green color. It may be new, however, to many to know that oysters are born precisely the same way the shad and other fish come into the world. A well educated lady oyster will lay about 125,000,000 eggs—so it is said; I have not counted enough of them to strike such a large average—and every one of these eggs will ultimately become fit for stew or fry if they escape the multitude of perils that do environ the infant oyster.

An Intelligent Reptile.

"I want to tell you how my child's life was saved up in the mountains the other day," said an old farmer who came into the Appeal office yesterday. "You don't mind an item with a snake in it, do you?" Hearing no reply the old man continued: "Last Tuesday I was coming down from the lake with my little girl, when I stopped the horse and got out to get a drink at a spring, my bottle having given out. While I was drinking the horse got frightened and dashed down the road with the child in the wagon. I only have twelve girls, sir, and wouldn't spoil the set for worlds. Well, I gave up the horse and child for lost, but I followed them up, and presently found the horse on the edge of a precipice, at a dead standstill. He couldn't move an inch. When I got closer I saw that a strap had caught round his fetlock and one end had also caught round a tree, I went to pull on the strap and I jumped about ten feet, for burst me clear open if it wasn't a rattlesnake that was holding the horse. He had wound his tail around the horse's leg and his neck was turned three times around a sappling and his teeth was fast in the wood. He was twelve feet long, sir, for I measured him right then and there. A few pounds more strain would have snapped the snake clear in two. I got the horse away from the precipice. And I might as well tell you the whole truth. The snake wasn't over five feet long, for when I took the strain off he came back to his natural size. You know how elastic a snake is. The child is 4 years old and wasn't frightened in the least. If you put this item in the weekly send me four copies—I want 'em for relatives in the East."

It has, no doubt, been a mystery to many how the iron ball inside of sleigh bells got there, and it is said to have taken considerable thought on the part of the discoverer before the idea struck him. In making sleigh bells the iron ball is put inside a sand core, just the shape of the inside of the bell. This sand core, with its jinglet inside, is placed in the mould of the outside, and the melted metal is poured in, which fills up the space between the core and mould. The hot metal burns the core so that it all can be shaken out, leaving the ball within the shell. Ball valves, swivel joints, and many other articles are cast in the same manner.—Scientific American.

Early Dentistry.

Sir Gardner Wilkinson affirms that teeth stopped with gold have been found in Egyptian mummies, and other learned gentlemen hold vigorously that the thing is an impossibility. Dr. John Gaigor, in the interesting discussion going on in The British Medical Journal, says that in the Etruscan Museum of Corneto, the ancient Tarquinia of Etrurio, and a few hours distance from Rome, he has seen teeth in a skull bound together by threads of gold cleverly twisted in and out among them, and that he has seen the same thing in museums in the Vatican and elsewhere. From these facts he presumes it is quite probable the ancient Egyptians had more or less skillful dentists. His deduction is supported by a gentleman who is positive that he once saw in the Meyer Museum, in Liverpool, the jawbone of mummified Egyptian in which a number of teeth were secured by a golden wire. It is also claimed that the Hindoos 600 years ago, knew something about the art of binding together teeth that were disposed to abandon each other's company. Mr. Briggs, in his "Rise and Fall of the Mohammedan Power in India," describes a battle in which Kootub-ood-Din, the famous general of Mohammed Ghory, who built the Kootub, a tower which rises near Delhi to a height that makes it one of the most beautful wonders of the world, slew with an arrow a powerful rajah, whose corpse was afterwards identified, according to the writings of Ferishta, by his artificial teeth, which were bound together by wires of gold.

A CASE OF MODESTY.—The other night a policeman observed a man hanging around the entrance of a Michigan avenue hall in a queer sort of way, and he asked him if he belonged to the Order in session up stairs. The man replied he did, and the officer inquired: "Then why don't you go up?" "Well, I was thinking of it." "Haven't been expelled have you?" "Oh, no." "And you haven't lost your interest?" "I might as well tell you said the man, after beating around a while longer. "I went down to Toledo a few days ago, and somehow the story came back here that I was drowned. My lodge thereupon passed resolutions to the effect that I was honest, upright and liberal, and a shining ornament, and that what was its loss was my gain. I hate to walk in on 'em and bust those resolutions. I've tried it three times, and I can't get higher than the fifth stair before I weaken."—Detroit Free Press.

A very singular accident occurred in a Cleveland hotel the other day. BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, June 10, 1881.

The first State Convention of the Constitutional Amendment Association of Pennsylvania, will be held at Johnstown on the 28th and 29th of June.

The legislative salary bill was indefinitely postponed in the House on Tuesday night. This is consistent at least, as the House had contended that the act of 1874 was constitutional.

The Postmaster General has already effected a saving of $750,000 a year in the Star route service. We are beginning to get an idea of the stealings during the "pure" administration of Hayes. The more that administration is investigated the worse it appears.

The species of statesmen known as "roosters" have had their way in Harrisburg and the Philadelphia Times admits the fact in the following mournful phrase: "The Delinquent Tax bill is dead. Funeral ceremonies in November, 1882. Friends are respectfully requested not to send floral tributes."

If the usual formality is observed this year and the House returns thanks to Speaker Hewit for his "courtesy, ability and impartiality" during the season, a shout of derisive laughter will go up from the Delaware to Lake Erie. There may have been a worse man in the chair, but the records will not show such to have been the case.

The legislature was in session 161 days. Most of the time was wasted in squabbling over the election of an United States Senator, in defeating needed legislation and in abusing editors and members by Hewit and the other "roosters." The popular grief at the adjournment was not overwhelming.

It is stated that Fred Grant has not resigned as Lieutenant of the Fourth Cavalry, but only his position on the staff of Gen. Sheridan. Now what the people would like to know, is, how Fred manages to engage in business and yet draw his salary as an army officer. To the average citizen this looks very like a fraud and a swindle.

The House joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors in the State, was defeated in the Senate on third reading, on Thursday of last week. The vote stood, yeas 16, nays 24. The prohibitionists asked for too much, and thereby ensured their own defeat.

It is rumored that First Assistant Postmaster General Tyner is to be removed and that ex-carpet-bag Senator Spencer is to succeed him. This is going from bad to worse. Spencer was in full bloom during the Grant administration and acquired a by no means savory reputation as a defender of the various "rings" then in power. There's not much reform to be expected from Spencer. Garfield has a positive genius for obnoxious appointments, and Spencer is a little worse than Kilpatrick, if anything.

The Philadelphia Times says of ex-Vice President Wheeler that he is "a very quiet man, and people laugh very good naturedly about his fishing proclivities. He shows up to excellent advantage, however, alongside of his successor. Mr. Wheeler never disgraced his office or himself by doing the dirty work of a ward politician."—This is as true as Gospel. Chester A. Arthur is the most indecorous and undignified vice-President the country has ever had. His removal from the Custom House by Hayes will be heartily endorsed, now that he has shown what manner of a man he is.

On Friday last W. E. Cameron, Democrat, was nominated for Governor and John P. Lewis, Republican, for Lieutenant Governor, by the Readjuster Convention in Richmond. It is claimed that the ticket is a strong one. Lewis was nominated to gain the Republican vote and it now remains to be seen whether the Republicans will aid Mahone and his followers. If they do, the strength gained for their party will be known at the next Presidential election. The Readjusters intend to repudiate some thirteen millions of the State debt.

The following officers of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar, were elected and installed, at Scranton, last week: Right Eminent Commander, George W. Kendrick, Jr., (advanced); V. E. Deputy Grand Commander, B. Frank Breneman (advanced); E. Grand Generalissimo, Charles W. Batchelor (advanced); E. Grand Captain-General, Edwin Martin (advanced from E. Grand Senior Warden); E. Grand Prelate, Rev. Addison V. C. Schenck (re-elected); E. Grand Senior Warden, Joseph Alexander Jr., (advanced); E. Grand Junior Warden, George S. Graham (elected); E. Grand Treasurer, M. Richards Muckle, (re-elected); E. Grand Recorder, Charles E. Meyer (re-elected.)

In the House at Harrisburg, on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Hazlet, one of the men denounced by the Philadelphia Times as a "corrupt legislative rooster," made a lively assault upon the editor of that paper, in which he accused him of being corrupt, both in his public and private life. Mr. Hazlet had read extracts from different newspapers abusing McClure, and ended by challenging him to make a specific charge of corrupt practice. Until such charge was made he branded McClure as "a liar, a blackguard and the hired defamer of honest men's names." Mr. Hazlet's effort created a sensation.

A very sanguine Philadelphia correspondent of the New York World is of opinion that the rule of the political bosses is nearly at an end in Philadelphia. He thinks that the severest blow given to the system is the recent action taken against James McManes, W. R. Leeds and other gas trustees, and predicts that "with their removal from office—which promises soon to take place—the overthtow of boss rule in Philadelphia will be complete and the supremacy of the people once more assured, and it is only reasonable to assume that not a single Don Cameron representative will be returned to the Legislature from the city." Well, perhaps so, but we should have more faith in the prediction if it were possible to believe that money no longer possessed purchasing power, that ballot-boxes could no longer be stuffed and, in short, that the saints had the numerical bulge on the sinners. We don't believe the millennium is so near at hand.

More than one thousand men employed by brewers in New York went on a strike, last Monday. They demanded that the hours of work be reduced from sixteen to twelve and that they be exempt from Sunday work.

The situation in Ireland is very grave and the recent collision between the people and the troops, in which life was lost, has left a very bitter feeling. There is danger that other disturbances may arise.

Both houses of the legislature transacted a large amount of business on Wednesday, and numerous bills were passed. The report of conference committees on general appropriation and judicial apportionment bills were concurred in.

The situation at Albany is practically unchanged. Conkling holds his own, but Platt is dropping back, and Chauncey M. Depew is coming to the front. It is impossible to predict what will be the result, but there seems to be no chance of Conkling and Platt's re-election.

It begins to look as if the bones of William Penn will not be brought to this country. The trustees of the Friends' burial ground in Buckinghamshire positively decline to permit the disinterment, Mr. Littleboy, one of the trustees, stands up like a little man and says as much. It's a pity, now that the Govenor has made all the appointments of managers and delegated a gentleman to go to England. After all, why should'nt the English Friends value the bones of Penn as much as the people of Pennsylvania?

THE STAR ROUTE THIEVES.

It was not to be expected that the Star route plunderers would quietly submit to exposure and punishment, and it will not cause surprise to know that they are preparing for a vigorous defence. They have engaged the best legal talent, including Ben Butler and Bob Ingersoll, and will hesitate at nothing to escape from the meshes of the law. They have money in abundance and lack in neither boldness nor ingenuity. Dorsey and Brady, the leading spirits in the plan dering, have evidently made up their minds that this investigation is something entirely different from the feeble efforts that have preceded it, and begin to believe that, unless they adopt vigorous measures, striped uniforms and involuntary seclusion will be their portion for many months to come. They are by no means insignificant foes, possessing wealth and influence, and it will require both skill and nerve on the part of the prosecution to ensure their conviction and punishment. A despatch to the Philadelphia Times from Washington, states that the Daily Critic has been bought by the friends of Brady and Dorsey and will be enlarged and improved. The Star route men already control the Republican and the Sunday Capital. Three newspapers will give them much power and it will be fully exercised.

In the postoffice department the government detectives and Special Prosecutor are hard at work compiling evidence to be submitted to the Grand Jury. Their proceedings are conducted with the utmost secrecy. The Star route thieves are said to be preparing for an attack on A. M. Gibson, the Sun correspondent now employed by the government, by whose patient research the exposure of the plurdering was made.

The case is one of the greatest interest to the people, who will watch every move with the utmost anxiety—no public plan dering on a large scale has been punished for many years past, and it is a matter, of doubt in the minds of many, whether these offenders will be sent to the penitentiary.

If Postmaster General James is sustained by the President and the prosecution is successfully conducted, the administration will earn such praise as will fairly offset much of the reproach incurred for past short-comings. Let it be once proved that wealthy and powerful ringsters can be punished like common thieves and the people will have increased confidence in a republican form of government.

HAYES ON CONKLING.

Rutherford B. Hayes has been heard from. He has been interviewed by a Herald reporter and stated that Mr. Conkling is a monomaniac on the subject of his own importance. He further remarked that Conkling made three attempts to betray the Republican party, one of which was the Electoral Commission. Hayes said "there never would have been a Potter Investigation Committee but for Conkling. The Democrats were loath to go into it, and only did so at the earnest solicitation of Conkling. I will not say he falsified in this case, for I think he really believed that the men on that Louisiana Board had entered into a bargain for the sale of that State, and Conkling assured Southern Senators that I would, from very shame, leave the White House in thirty days after the investigation had begun."

If Hayes had vouchsafed all this information when Conkling was still Senator, it would have sounded better. As it is, his attack strongly brings to mind an interesting little story told by one Aesop, in which a moribund lion and an excited animal of a less interesting type were principal actors. Whatever may be Mr. Conkling's faults, his contempt and aversion for Hayes will not be counted as one of them. Had Hayes left the White House "in thirty days after the investigation had begun," his place in history would have been a source of greater pride to his descendants than it will be now, and his utterances might have inspired respect. Conkling is undoubtedly vain and arrogant, but he would not have occupied for four years an office to which he was not elected.

Notice to those Claiming Pensions.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, } WASHINGTON, May 16, 1881 }

[Circular.]

There being now pending in this department great numbers of volunteer pension claims, which cannot be satisfactorily verified for want of information which missing records of discontinued volunteer commands would afford, and it having transpired in many instances that officers of the late volunteer forces have still in their possession, or under their control, books and other records pertaining to their corps, divisions, brigades, regiments, and companies, their attention is called to the fact that all such books and records should be deposited with this office, and they are earnestly requested to cause the same to be forwarded without delay to the Adjutant-General of the Army, at Washington, District of Columbia.

No expense, other than postage or proper express charges (when packages exceed four pounds, (the limit for mail parcels,) can be paid by the Government.

In the interest of the great number of widows, orphans, and disabled soldiers whose claims are involved, the newspapers of the country are requested to give the substance of this circular the greatest publicity.

It is almost time for excursions. Will you excursh this season?

Mrs. Laura Menagh and Miss Lizzie Wolf, of Shippensburg, are guests of Jno. Kressler.

For good Cabbage Plants go to W. H. Yetter. He has about one and a half acres best seed sowed, and plants fine.

Mr. C. P. Sloan has painted his residence on Market street, thereby much improving its appearance.

The recent heavy showers have prostrated the wheat in places, and will entail some losses.

There was frost in Sullivan county on Tuesday night last.

Luzerne County has two or three boat clubs, and it is proposed to have a regatta at Harvey's Lake on the Fourth of July.

The large trees in front of the Court House, were trimmed on Monday, and the town clock in the tower is now visible from the street.

Mr. Cyrus B. McHenry, Mercantile Appraiser, was in town on Tuesday for the purpose of entertaining appeals from his list.

400,000 Cabbage Plants for sale by W. H. Yetter, Bloomsburg, Pa. Patches on Fourth street, near Market. may27tf

James Wolf cut one of his hands quite seriously, on Monday, at the planing mill. Dr. Gardner was called to dress the wounds.

The Winona Fire Company will hold a festival, probably in the Opera House, on the evenings of the 1st, 2d and 4th of July next.

On Sunday night last, there was a severe frost at different places in Canada and at Watertown, New York. Vennor was not much out of the way in his prediction, after all.

The Fourth of July will be the next "day we celebrate." Are there to be any public ceremonies? If so, arrangements should be made at once, and the results published.

Several additional announcements of the names of candidates appear in the COLUMBIAN this week. There are two months yet in which to work.

The fourth annual commencement exercises of the Lewistown Academy will be held in the Presbyterian church of that town on the 21st inst.

Hereafter trains on the L. & B. R. R. will run at a reduced rate of speed at the East Street crossing, and those bound South will whistle on approaching the crossing.

Adam Geringer, for many years proprietor of the City Hotel, Danville, died very suddenly on Wednesday morning, of heart disease. He was about sixty years of age.

We are indebted to Hon. J. B. Knittle, for a copy of the Report of the Pennsylvania Board of the Northern and Western Boundary Commissions, for 1879 and 1880.

The black bass fishing in Wayne and Pike counties is said to be the best ever known. This will cheer the hearts of anglers down this way.

The festival of the Reformed Church, held last Friday and Saturday evenings in Evans' Hall, was quite successful in every respect. The receipts were about $104.

The base ball club of Bloomsburg defeated a nine at Sunbury on Saturday last, by a score of 6 to 2. Our club is earning an enviable reputation for skill in the national game.

Gilbert F. Driesbach of Hazleton, well known in this county, died very suddenly on Friday night last. Mr. Driesbach had been engaged in the liquor business for some years.

Remember, you can get a first-class article at the People's Drug and Book Store. Everything is kept in the line of Drugs, Books, Stationery, Wall Paper and Window Shades.

Robins have selected fence corners and bushes for their nests this season. This is said to portend violent storms all through the coming summer.

John Sands of Mordansville died on Monday morning last aged about 45 years. He was employed in the mills of his brother C. L. Sands, and had charge of the buying of the wool used.

"When I publicly testified that I had been cured of a terrible skin humor by the Cuticura Remedies, I did so that others might be cured, and do not regret the time given to answering inquiries."—Hon. William Taylor, Boston.

L. Bernhard invites the attention of the public to his large stock of American and imported watches, lately received. He has also a fine lot of Jewelry and Silverware, all of which he is offering at very low prices.

The music at the Episcopal church on Whitsunday was unusually fine, being quite equal to that of Easter. The excellent quartette choir has gained the reputation of being one of the best in the Diocese.

We read every now and then of fishing parties returning home with three or four hundred trout, the result of a day's sport. The trout are little things, three or four inches in length, much too small to be caught. Such fishing as this is what depletes our streams. There ought to be a law for the protection of infant trout.

This is the month of roses—and of rain. If the Vennor-able man in charge of the weather department would kindly hoist the barometer up to "fair," and turn on some sun, the effect upon the corn crops would be of corn-siderable interest to the farmers.

The proprietors of the Williamsport Sun have purchased the half interest in the Banner owned by Jacob Sallade, and the two papers will be consolidated on the 15th inst. Henry T. Sallade and Henry M. Wolf, Jr., will be the editors. Some changes and improvements are contemplated, and the name of the paper will be the Sun and Banner. Although this reduces the number of Democratic papers in the city, it cannot be considered a loss, as there will be a joining of the brains of the two offices.

The Bloomsburg Iron Company are building a new dam to replace the one destroyed last Spring.

On one of the hot days of May, several newly-hatched chicks were killed by sun-stroke, the hen having left them temporarily exposed to the intense heat. This is the only case we know to be authentic.

The Cincinnati Enquirer is responsible for the alarming statement that there is danger of the revival of hoopskirts. We mention the fact that our lady readers may get good and mad before the fashion sets in.

Bass fishing does not amount to much yet, as the fish do not bite freely so early in the season. It would be well if the law of New York and New Jersey were adopted in this State, permitting bass to be caught on and after July 1st.

For heavy and lodged grass the No. 5 wrought iron frame mower made by D. M. Osborne & Co. beats them all. It has Enclosed Gear, Brass Pitman Boxes, handles easy and runs very light.

The Supreme Court of New York has authorized the corporation of Scribner & Co., to change its name to "The Century Co."—the order to take effect on the 21st of June. The July issues of Scribner's Monthly and St. Nicholas will have the new corporate print.

Husbands are not required to pay debts of their wives, except for articles of necessity. A Philadelphia judge recently decided such a case, in which the price of a silk dress was involved. The decision of his Honor was, "a silk dress is not a necessity and that the husband need not pay the bill," and he did not.

There were only two cases taken to the Supreme Court, this term, from Columbia county, Young's appeal and Goodman vs. Sanger. A non pros was entered in the former on Monday. Lightner's appeal and Welch's appeal, both from Montour county, were argued on Monday.

Governor Hoyt has appointed Hon. William Elwell as Columbia County's representative on the board of managers of the Bi-Centennial Association, to celebrate the 200th anniversary of Pennsylvania, on the Fourth of July next. The board is composed of one gentleman from each county in the State.

Does the corn grow in this weather? It does not grow, it stands still and waits for sunshine. Does the farmer enjoy this sort of thing? He does not enjoy it, he is inclined to howl and smash things. Will that assist the corn? It will not assist the corn but it will relieve the pressure on his temper.

The Census Bureau is sending out blank forms, to be filled with religious statistics of various kinds. The information obtained will be of great value to all who are interested in Church matters. The Secretaries of the Young Men's Christian Associations are, quite naturally called upon to furnish much of the required information.

The Supreme Court, on Monday, rendered a decision in the case of the Bourgnigner Building Association vs. the Commonwealth affirming the judgment of the Court below, that building associations are liable to taxation. Justice Green filed the opinion, which is quite long. The case has excited much interest throughout the State on account of the importance of the questions involved.

Two millions of young shad are to be placed in the Susquehanna at various points between the head waters and the Columbia dam. If the Fish Commissioners will devise some plan to prevent black bass from devouring these infant shad, the experiment may have satisfactory results. The poisonous mine water on the North branch will speedily destroy the fish above the Nanticoke dam.

The next meeting of the Pennsylvania State Millers' Association will be held at Pittsburg, next September, during the continuance of the State Fair. The Pennsylvania Agricultural Society has offered to furnish power and all the space wanted by the Millers' Association for the exhibition of machinery in their line, free, and will also offer premiums for mill machinery and mill products.

Are you going to paint? If so, send to Henry S. Reay, Montour Paint Works, Rupert, Pa., for sample card and prices of Strictly Pure White Lead. Slate Colors, Iron Paints, Putty &c., and save the wholesale and retail profit. You can mix your own colors, from best material, with Pure Linseed Oil, for 75 cents to $1.20 per gallon.

Respectfully Yours &c.,

A kind of variety show, traveling under the name of the Don Allen Combination Circus, arrived in town on Wednesday. A meagre audience was under the canvas at the evening performance. There were athletic feats, character acting, songs and dances, such as are to be seen in the ordinary variety entertainment. As a circus it amounted to nothing—nor was it very remarkable in any respect.

BIG HIM GOOD.

Mr Charles H. Bauer, editor of the above paper and Notary Public, in a late issue mentions the following: Patrick Kenny, Esq., some time ago, suffered much from rheumatism and tried almost every means to rid himself of this painful evil, but in vain. He was advised to use St. Jacobs Oil, which he did so successfully, that all pain has left him and he is as healthy and strong as ever before. Mr. Kenny is an enthusiastic advocate of St. Jacobs Oil, and it has done him good.

The law now makes it a misdemeanor for any minor to knowingly and falsely represent himself to be of full age, for the purpose of obtaining intoxicating liquors. This law should be rigidly enforced and liquor dealers held to a strict accountability for selling intoxicants to persons under age. There is no excuse whatever, moral or legal, for a minor who is seen in public under the influence of liquor. His condition proves him a law-breaker, subject to pains and penalties.

A sarcastic exchange thus relieves its mind, on a subject of daily conversation at this time: "How is the wheat coming on?" is a question heard almost daily. Well, it's about this way: if there's too much rain it will rust, if there's not enough it will spot; if a cold snap and a hard frost comes it will wilt. But if the weather is all that can be desired the wheat crop will be a good one, provided it is not injured by the grass-hoppers, locusts and other bugs, or that no heavy rain, hail, or wind storms beat it down. And yet some men will predict good wheat crops a year before harvest.

A New York jury recently awarded a man six cents damages for the loss of his wife's affections, she having deserted him for another fellow. This is exactly six cents more than the alleged affections are worth, and the husband is just that much ahead, in cash.

An M. E. Convention of the Danville district met in the M. E. church in this town on Tuesday and continued in session until Thursday. There was a large attendance both of ministers and laymen. The matters discussed were such as relate to the better management of the affairs of the church. There were some eighty delegates present, and at the sessions many interested visitors were in attendance.

The Oil City Derrick has the following scholarly criticism, which has only to be read to be appreciated: "We have received an advance copy of a new publication entitled "The New Testament, Revised Edition." We have not yet had time to look it over carefully, but it is well printed and seems to be ably edited. It is independent in politics and we predict for it a prosperous career."

The New York Sun of Wednesday last says, "While the rain was pouring and spattering in the streets yesterday the barometers in the opticians' shops all persistently pointed to the fair weather mark. April weather at the opening of June is, apparently, a phenomenon that not only sets the prophets all at sea, but even deceives the barometers." The year 1881 has thus far been full of meteorological surprises, but none more odd than the above.

A concert will be given in the hall of the Normal School this evening, by the pupils of the Music Department, under direction of Prof. Niles. The new Weber upright piano will be used on the occasion. Among the selections is an operetta by sixteen performers, and this alone should serve to fill the hall, as it will be given in the most artistic manner. It is believed that this concert will excel any of its predecessors, as the pupils are fully prepared. Tickets may be procured at George A. Clark's book store.

The rainy weather for the last week is very hard on the wheat; we notice in a great many fields the grain is down and badly lodged. It will require good reapers to do the work this year. Mr. William Eyerly near Buckhorn, says he had an extraordinarily heavy piece of wheat last year which yielded forty-three bushels to the acre. He used a No. 6, combined machine made by D. M. Osborne & Co. which did the work most excellently and to the surprise of many farmers who stopped at Mr. Eyerly's to see a reaper work in such heavy grain.

The work of improving the channel of the Susquehanna below Wilkes-Barre, is still in progress and bids fair to be successful. The dykes built last fall withstood the heavy masses of ice thrown against them in the winter, and by them the channel is materially deepened. Men are now removing gravel from the bar and it is thought a sufficient depth of water will be secured, to float the steamboats during the entire summer. The travel by boat between Wilkes-Barre, Plymouth and Nanticoke is very large during hot weather, and will be greater than ever when it is known that the trips will not be interrupted.

Several prominent citizens of Wilkes-Barre have resolved to offer three competitive prizes valued at $800, $250 and $150, respectively, to be awarded the three best drilled companies of the National Guard of the State, that enter for competition. The competitive examination is to take place in Wilkes-Barre, annually, the first of the series to occur this Fall. The Union Leader says: "It is designed to make these contests perpetual, by compelling the successful commands to win the palm of victory three times, against all comers, before it passes into company ownership, and when such prize ceases to be a longer object for competition, its place is to be supplied by as valuable a substitute."

LIBERAL BEQUESTS.

In the will of Joseph W. Hibbs, of Roaring-creek township, who died about a year and a half ago, the following bequests were made to the various charitable institutions named:

Indigent widows and single women's Society,	$1,000.00
Institution for the instruction of the Blind,	900.00
Friends' Asylum for the Insane,	500.00
Female Society for the relief and employment of the Poor,	800.00
Home for aged and infirm colored persons,	400.00
Training school for feeble minded children,	500.00
Shelter for colored orphans,	500.00
Westtown boarding school,	100 00
Movamensing House of Industry,	400 00
Will's Hospital for the Blind,	300.00
Institution for the deaf and dumb,	300.00
Friend's Establishment among Indians at Tunesassa,	200.00
Friends of Muncy Monthly Meeting,	500 00

The several soup societies of Philadelphia also received amounts.

DEATH OF A VETERAN.

The venerable Alexander Colley of Benton township, reached the end of his long life last Monday afternoon. He was born on the 17th of August, 1786, and was, therefore, in the 95th year of his age. Some three weeks ago, Mr. Colley had a fall, the result, it was thought, of a paralytic stroke and never left his bed nor spoke afterwards.

Many years ago, Mr. Colley served a term as member of the legislature. He was well known as a surveyor, and also as a conveyancer, having drawn the greater number of wills, deeds and other legal papers, for residents of the upper part of the county for years past. After an active and useful life of almost a century, he has passed from earth to the rest that follows honorable labor. A large circle of relatives and friends will sincerely regret the death of the aged man. The funeral took place on Thursday morning, and was attended by scores of mourners.

On the 23d of October, 1828, in Danville, Pa., there was gathered a large assembly of citizens and masonic brethern, from far and near, for the purpose of laying the corner stone of Christ P. E. church, Lodge No. 106, of Williamsport, with their banner representing "strength," being the third in order of the procession. Divine service was performed at the court house, Rev. Robert Piggot, D. D., Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, officiating. When the services were completed, the brethren and citizens proceeded to the site of the church, when the corner stone was laid in ancient masonic form by William Donaldson, W. M., of Columbia Lodge, Danville. Of the officers and members of Lodge, No. 106, who were present upon that occasion, not one remains, all having gone to that bourne from whence no traveler returns. That venerable building, hallowed with the tenderest and deepest associations known to the human heart, has been razed to the ground to give place to a grand memorial church to be erected by the executors of Peter Baldy, deceased; and now, after the lapse of more than half a century, when nearly two generations of men have passed away, Lodge No. 106, with other lodges, expect to be present and assist in laying the corner stone of the new "Christ Church." The ceremony will be performed by the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania on St. John the Baptist's day, June 24, 1881. Rev. Robert Piggot, D. D., now 85 years of age, who preached at the similar service fifty three years ago, will preach the sermon, and Past Master William Donaldson, who as W. M., laid the former corner stone, is expected to join the work. The occasion is expected to be one of great interest, and a full representation of the order is desired. —Williamsport Gazette & Bulletin.

WHAT JINKS THINKS.

Jinks says he doesn't like th— heavy showers. He went home one day last week in a thunder storm, and got wet through, taking the starch all out of a new white duck suit, and his wife blew him up for not wearing his gossamer overcoat, forgetful of the fact that she had loaned it to her brother a few days before to go off on a summer trip. Jinks had to change all his clothes, and about the time he had got fresh harness on, his wife called his attention to the fact that the spout from the verandah was stopped up, and the water would pour over the edges in a few moments and ruin her flower beds below. He took the kitchen poker and went to poke the leaves out of the spout. About the time he got the leaves loosened up, the water reached the top of the trough on the verandah, and four barrels full came over at once, lighting gracefully on Jinks' shoulders. At the same time, the leaves and water came out with a rush and attacked him in the front with a pressure of about two hundred pounds to the square inch. As soon as Jinks could catch his breath, and pick himself out of the mud, he went in the house and told his wife he had got things fixed so that there was no danger of injuring the flower beds, whereupon the ungrateful woman reminded him that he had ruined his Sunday broadcloth suit, and blew him up again for walking all over the parlor carpet with his muddy shoes. He might have waited until a pleasant day to clean that spout out, she said. Jinks changed his clothes again and put on his new embroidered slippers and sat down to read the evening paper. Just as he was becoming absorbed, his wife came in and told him that if he wanted any butter for supper, he could go out to the ice house and get it. Jinks went, and as he stepped into the spring house he simultaneously stepped into three feet of water that had ran in under the door. Then Jinks got up and said some awful things, and started for the house with a fixed determination of expressing his opinion to his wife about the proper place to keep the butter, but just as he reached the back door and before he could open his mouth, his wife threw out a pan of dish water, which took Jinks squarely in the face, and before he could get the grease out of his mouth, she lectured him on his carelessness in going out in the wet with his new slippers, and said a whole lot of other things about how clumsy a man is, and how little he cares for the trouble he makes his poor wife. Then Jinks didn't say a word, but he insists upon it that he doesn't like these heavy showers.

SENSIBLE SUGGESTIONS.

EDITORS COLUMBIAN: I notice in your issue of May 27th, that it is a good time for Democrats to make up their minds as to what kind of men they will support; whether they will put in nomination men who will be a by word and a disgrace to the good old Democratic party, or select men whose records are square. The question arises, what constitutes a square record? I will give a negative answer—It is not one who starts out to secure his nomination and election by means of money and drink. If the party were to place men in nomination whose record for honesty and fair dealing were above reproach, there would be no need of traveling through the county trespassing upon our time, shaking hands with every one they meet, and making themselves disagreeable generally. Some two or three years ago, I was at work about half a mile from the house. I was sent for, and came in to find a candidate for treasurer, and two candidates for commissioner sitting in the shade, waiting for me. I felt—well, you know how one would feel. Now, what I want to say is this: Amend the rules so that a man who is a candidate shall stay at home and show the people that if he cannot be elected by fair, honorable means, he will follow some other vocation. I believe the people are tired of the kind of men they are compelled to support, and would rally around and elect good men without candidates doing so much boring. I for one, am tired of such proceedings and unless there is a radical change in the party machinery, will favor a convention of the people, independent of the partisan politicians: to put in nomination good, sound men. I am a firm believer in Democratic principles and mean to hold to them until I am convinced that the founders of those principles were in error.

There are a number of men in and out of Congress, who call themselves Democrats who are not "Simon pure." In fact, we have them in office everywhere; in our State legislature, in our county and township offices. Now, the question is, do we propose to continue to send men to do the public business that not one-half of us would trust to transact our individual affairs? Before closing this communication, I would like to ask the people of the county to give expression to their thoughts on this subject through your paper, believing as I do, that no harm can come from it and it may result in much good. A. M. WHITE.

THE TOWN COUNCIL.

At a meeting of the Council held on Wednesday evening last, all the members were present. The minutes of the last regular and special meetings were read and approved. A petition to open a new street, from Rock street near the Welsh church, to the Light Street road, was indefinitely postponed. The grade on various streets and alleys was discussed and adopted.

Mr. Neal moved that six whistles be bought for the police. Adopted.

Mr. Rabb moved that $75 be appropriated to procure horns, cap plates and belts for the firemen. Adopted.

Mr. Neal moved that the Town remove the cinder hole in the streets by the Water Company in laying pipe. Mr. Rabb offered an amendment that the Water Company be notified to do this work and that in case of neglect and refusal, the Street Commissioner remove the same and that the expense, with twenty per cent added, be deducted from the next payment due the Company. The amendment was adopted by a vote of 4 to 3. Messrs Neal, Hartman and Correll voting in the negative.

The grade on Catharine street was adopted as returned by the engineer. Council will meet at one o'clock Saturday afternoon the 18th inst. to hear the parties interested, and also to hear appeals from the tax levy.

The following bills were approved and the Secretary directed to draw orders for the payment of the same.

Milton E. Cox	$ 1.75
Water Company	100.00
Meyer Bros. rent of lock up	20 00
Street Commissioner	56.80
Samuel Neyhard	18 42
Town Constable	10.33

BOHRSBURG ITEMS.

Death, the destroyer of the high and low, has again visited our little community, making sad hearts in many homes. Miss Ida Wellliver, aged 19 years, daughter of Daniel Wellliver, was buried on Tuesday, and John Sands a prominent citizen on Wednesday. He leaves two daughters, orphans, their mother having preceded him a few short years. Mr. Sands' death cast a gloom throughout the whole neighborhood.

Mr. Stacey Hescock was also buried on Wednesday. After going through a course of lectures at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, he was attacked with malarial fever, which terminated in consumption. He was a young man of much promise and a bright future seemed spread out before him, but the relentless hand of the destroyer laid him low.

It is reported that Dr. Harder will leave Rohrsburg in the near future and locate in Bloomsburg. His many friends here will be sorry to lose his medical attendance, but the good wishes of all will follow him wherever he goes.

Mr. I. F. Black and wife will start next week on a pleasure trip to Tioga county.

Mrs. Jane Long has returned from a visit to her sons.

BERWICK LETTER.

Mr. S. C. Jayne will soon erect a new dwelling house on his vacant lot on Front street. The cellar has already been dug.

On Tuesday, Mr. F. G. Atherton and wife started for their new home in Iowa. They had been visiting her mother, Mrs. H. H. Wentler.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Klinger buried their youngest child, a daughter, one day this week.

Mr. Henry Garrison has began to run his strawberry wagon through town.

Next Sunday will be floral Sunday at the M. E. church. The little ones are preparing themselves for a treat.

The Sunday afternoon meetings of the Y. M. C. A. are now held in Reservoir Park. They are of a very interesting character and well attended.

Rev. H. A. Curran, of Bloomsburg, occupied the pulpit of the M. E. church in this place on Sunday.

We notice some of the men turning their steps to the lower end of the town where the manufacture of beer is carried on. Although they dare not sell it by the glass, we are informed they do by the bottle. Is there no possible way to prevent this?

A man by the name of Kase was taken with severe cramp on Tuesday, at the Jackson & Woodin Manufacturing Co's. works. He was taken to Dr. Little's office and afterwards to his home in Nescopeck.

Mr. D. W. Smith, of Limestoneville, Montour county, says he has used an "Osborne" Self-binder since 1879; has cut 160 acres; been at no expense for repairs; has cut oats that were as badly down and tangled as it was possible to be, and will wager the price of the machine that he can cut any grain that it is possible to cut with any machine, and bind it tighter and better than can be done by hands. T. W. Pursel, near Buck Horn, says the "Osborne" Self-binder bought last year, "fills the bill" and does all that is claimed for it.

P. E. Maus, near Danville, says he cut the worst tangled oats he ever saw, last year, with the "Osborne," and cannot speak too highly in its praise.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

There is a dangerous counterfeit in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of the great value of "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer" is the fact that parties knowing its efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a "fac simile" of the signature of "O. E. Becker"—the manufacturer—blown in the glass; and the "Restorer" is so clear and harmless as water, while it possesses all the component properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth, and color to the hair. Purchasers only from responsible parties. Each bottle warranted. C. S. Clifford, New York City, Wholesale Agent. oct. 22, 80-tf are undoubtedly the cheapest and most durable fence made, is not effected by fire, wind or flood, does not cause snow drifts, takes fewer posts and stock cannot push it down. Our wire is four pointed, is made of two strands of number 12 best galvanized steel wire twisted together just enough to allow for contraction and expansion in Summer and Winter, barbs are fastened every seven inches. The use of barbed wire is no longer an experiment, as last year over one hundred thousand miles were put up. We believe our wire to be the best and cheapest now manufactured because it is made of the best steel wire and runs 15 feet to the pound having the greatest strength and visibility with the least weight of any made. Put up on spools of about 100 rods weighing about 100 pounds. Price per pound 11 cents by the spool, less quantities 11½ cents per pound.

BARBED WIRE

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

It does not seem to be generally understood by some of our trade that we are prepared to do Tinsmithing in all its branches. This we have often noticed by the expressions of surprise of many who, when in the rear of our store, noticed men working in an adjoining building. We carry a full stock of Tin and Tinsmith's Supplies and are prepared at all times to do all kinds of work. As low prices seem to be the most popular we have

The Farm Laborer.

Many farmers, especially those somewhat advanced in years, contend that the time was when there was no difficulty in getting hands to work whenever they were needed; but of latter years this has not been the case. Men, they say, needing work, would sooner go round as tramps, and hang about cities with nothing to do, than to go out to the country to our farms, where they are needed, and do an honest day's work. We hardly think that things are as bad as this. There never was any difficulty in getting permanent hands, nor is there much now. The trouble is to get men for a few weeks only, as temporary or extra help; and in this there always was trouble and there always will be.

Men are pretty much all alike. They have friends, acquaintainces and associations, and the temptation to keep near them is natural and strong. They may not have work now, and there may be work fifty or one hundred miles away, but surely something will turn up near home, among so many looking out for them, and they let the probable chance go by. Then it costs money to go to these distant places, and they have nothing to spare for the chance.

It is not unreasonable that men should think in this way. And then there is the natural indisposition of men to take in and board total strangers for a short time, even when work is pushing to be done; and it is no uncommon thing for persons to refuse applicants work when they really need them, because they do not like their looks. Many a man has actually started off from the towns to the country in search of work which he has been told is plenty there, only to find day after day of disappointment, and to discover in the end that it was much easier to beg than to find work. We have indeed no doubt that in many cases the great tramp brigade has been recruited by men who, failing to find work, reduced to beggary by the chapter of accidents, have taken to this as a regular profession. Once reduced to this, lazy habits of course set in, and then the tramp wants food and money, and anything else than work.

We fear these things will always be, and the only remedy is the increase of chances of steady work. Our farm life is rather deficient in this respect, and perhaps more so since the introduction of so much labor saving machinery. If it could be so ordered that there would always be employment at every season in the year for men living about farms, so that they could always be at hand—men whom one knows and can trust—there would be very little cry for extra help. We suppose farming will never come to this, but it might be brought nearer to it in many cases than it is now.—Germantown Telegraph.

The craze over the "Hungarian Grass," a new name for the good old one of millet, has, like so many other things that are flashed upon us, had its day, and has now measurably disappeared, leaving only here and there evidences of its career. But the German millet has high claims to consideration that nearly or quite equal any of the rest, for it really possesses substantial value and fair claims upon the attention of farmers. An acre or two would always come into use and pay well, especially as it can be cut for green food the latter part of August and forepart of September when pastures are frequently short. It should be sown any time from the 25th of June to the 10th of July, and it will take about five-eighths of a bushel of seed to the acre. It also makes fair hay, cattle eating it freely; and the seed is ground for horse feed, and in parts of Germany and Hungary bread is made of the flour. Fowls in winter are especially fond of the seed and fatten upon it. Four tons of hay to the acre is not a heavy crop.—Germantown Telegraph.

The cheapest meat for a farmer, says an exchange, is mutton. It may safely be said to cost nothing, as the fleece from the sheep of a good breed will pay for its keeping. Then for additional profit there is a lamb or two, the pelt of the animal, if killed at home, the excellent manure from its droppings and the riddance of the pasture from weeds, to which sheep are destructive foes. With the exception of poultry, mutton is the cheapest meat for a farmer. A sheep is easily killed and dressed by a single hand in an hour, and in the warmest weather it can be readily disposed of before it spoils. Science and experience both declare it the healthiest kind of meat.

The record kept by Enos Savage, of East-Coventry, Chester county, shows how much can be made from a few hens when they receive proper attention. He owns thirty fowls, which were kept in a warm place all winter, fed a variety of food and given plenty of pure water. From the first of December to April first, he rent weekly to market an average of twelve dozen eggs, the total being 1152, each hen producing an average of 86. Mr. S. says his receipts from the sale of eggs were $52, and the expenses for food, &c., $10, leaving a profit of $42, or a fraction over $1.32 per hen. If any of our readers kept an account of the expenses and profits of their poultry during the past winter, we would like to hear from them.—Germantown Telegraph.

A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker advises stock raisers not to be in haste to destroy any animal that may break a leg, for by means of plaster of Paris and some bagging strips, the limb may be set and supported until the fractured bone unites again. His plan has been, both with calves and sheep, to wind the strips of bagging about the broken limb, plaster over with calcined plaster mixed to a thin paste, wind other strips over that and apply more plaster the leg being fastened to splints of wood until the plaster sets. The animal would limp around for a few days on three legs but recovered without blemish.

It is reported that the largest hog in the country is a Poland-China, 4 years old this spring, lately on exhibition at Junction City, Kansas. His length is 7 feet, girth of neck 6½ feet; girth of chest 7½ feet; girth of centre 8 feet; width across the hips 30 inches, and weight 1,532 pounds.

ROSE COLD AND HAY FEVER.

Being seriously troubled with Hay Fever and Rose Cold, I (at the solicitation of a friend) tried Ely's Cream Balm and was surprised in obtaining almost immediate relief. I heartily indorse and earnestly recommend it to all similarly afflicted. W. P. Andrus, Druggist, Metuchen, N. J., August 20, 1879.

For Hay Fever I recommend Ely's Cream Balm. It entirely relieved me from the first application; have been a sufferer for ten years. Going from home and neglecting to take the remedy, I had an attack; after returning I immediately resorted to it, and found instant relief. I believe, had I begun its use earlier, I should not have been troubled. Have stood heat, dust and draughts as well as during other months. J. Coltyer, Clerk, 118 Broad street, Elizabeth, N. J. GRAPE CULTURE AND WINE.

Mr. A. Speer, of New Jersey, one of the largest grape producers in the East, commenced, but a few years ago, in a small way, to make wine from currants, blackberries and other fruits. He now controls large vineyards of the Oporto grape, from which his famous Port Grape Wine is made, and which chemists and physicians say rivals the world for its beneficial effects on weakly and aged persons, and consumptives. LATEST FROM MAINE.

Lock's Mills, Oxford co., Me.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland:
Gents:—On the 22nd of November, 1879, our steam mill at this place, 30x46, two stories high, was totally consumed by fire, in which there was a large quantity of spool lumber, spools and blocks, all seasoned. The fire burned for three and a half days. We had one of your safes in our mill and the day morning following, eleven hours after the fire, it was too hot to handle, being covered with burning blocks. Some time after it was opened and the contents were in a good state of preservation, not a book or paper being destroyed. I am satisfied with your safes and have purchased another, and can cheerfully recommend them to any one wishing to secure their valuables from being destroyed by fire.
Yours truly, I. G. TIBBS.

TREMENDOUS TEST.

Roasting Thirty Hours in a Bed of Red Hot Coals.

Cornith, N. Y., January 6, '81.
Morris & Ireland Boston, Mass.
Gentlemen:—On the night of the fire in our village on the 26th ult., I had in use one of your No. 9 Safes. I am pleased to inform you, after the floor gave way it fell into the cellar, into a heap of burning coal, where it roasted for thirty hours, our citizens and myself gave up the hope of anything being saved in it, on being taken from the ruins I was happily disappointed to find my cash, vouchers and other articles of value perfectly preserved. The combination works well now. I am satisfied your new and improved work, one of which, a No. 20, I have ordered of your agent to-day, will afford absolute protection in any fire.
Truly Yours, E. S. BARNES.

STILL AHEAD.

Rochester, N. H., Dec. 17, '80.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland:
Dear Sirs:—In the disastrous fire which took place in this town Nov. 26, the Morris and Ireland safe in my store was subjected to a severe heat, being thrown into the centre and a huge mass of debris fell upon it, and it was in this condition some two days. I take pleasure in informing you that upon examination it was open without removal the contents were found to be safe and saved. I cheerfully recommend your safe as being worthy of the confidence it has received from the public.
Yours truly, C. W. HOWE.

STILL ANOTHER.

From the Great Fire in Troy, New York.
Troy, N. Y., December 11, 1879.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland, Boston:
Gentlemen:—After witnessing the charred books out of the safes to-day, also one of my own which was another maker's which was not in the least of the fire like the No. 61 I fully reimbursed of you, which was in the fire over forty-eight hours, and had to be continually played on during Monday night, as it was considered unsafe to rest with burning materials so much fire in the safe, on opening it in the morning Tuesday. Hereunto, I was pleased to find the contents, books, papers and money were all preserved in a thankful good condition, which is full proof of the first qualities of your safes we have given on your agent an order for one No. 9 safe.
Yours respectfully, DAVIS & CO.

Morris & Ireland's Safe Again Triumphant—Messrs. Rice, Kendall & Co's. Large Safe Reveals Its Valuable contents Intact after being subjected to fierce heat for nine hundred and thirty hours.

Boston, January 2, 1880.
Messrs. Morris & Ireland, Boston:
Gents:—On the night of December 28, last, the building occupied in part by us at No. 11 Federal street, in which it was four of the hottest and most combustible fires, in which there was a large quantity of wood, waste paper, stock, finders' materials and other merchandise. While several other large buildings adjoining ours were burned to the same time, the fire was here exhausted for the same time, the fire was here exhausted for the same time, the fire was here exhausted for
